A harvest of 8,000 bushels from 70 acres of Gladioli enables me to sell you these bulbs at these low prices in small quantities and at extra low prices in large quantities.

My exhibit at the American Gladiolus Society's Show at Springfield, Ill., August, 1929, at the Men's Garden Club Show at Garfield Park, Chicago, and other exhibits, were prize winners and were commented on for quality and the wide range of beautiful colors. This is truly a wonderful recommendation for a choice selection of beautiful gladioli.

My Method of Growing and Handling Quality Bulbs

N the spring, ground which has grown leguminous crops for several years is deeply plowed and then well worked into a fine seed bed.

Just before planting the bulbs are soaked for an hour or more in an antiseptic solution for the purpose of counteracting any trace of diseases or pests which might later affect either the bulbs or blooms.

Rows three feet apart are then marked out, grooved V shape and five inches deep. Planted in this manner, the bulbs will grow in a single row making it easier to keep free from weeds and to cultivate closely without damage to either the plants or roots. Plentiful cultivation is very essential.

At flowering time all blooms are removed, thus conserving the full energy of the plant for maturing the bulbs and which also prevents the plant from becoming loosened in heavy winds. Especial care is used in cutting blooms and six leaves are left on the plant.

Digging is deferred until the bulbs have reached full maturity but we do not wait until the foliage has turned brown.

After digging, the bulbs are stored in shallow trays, four inches deep and two by three feet in length and width. They are then ranked in tiers in my specially built bulb house in such a way as to have plenty of ventilation at all times.

The bulb house is carefully kept at such temperature and humidity as years of experience has taught us to be correct for curing and storage of gladiolus bulbs. These methods not only give you bulbs of wonderful reproduction qualities but also keep the stored bulbs free from disease.

All work in connection with growing bulbs for selling, including the important work of cleaning and order filling, is done by experienced workmen who are carefully trained and capable.

My specially built modern storage building has 5000 square feet of floor space and was built for no other purpose than that of storing and handling high quality bulbs. It is complete and modern every way.

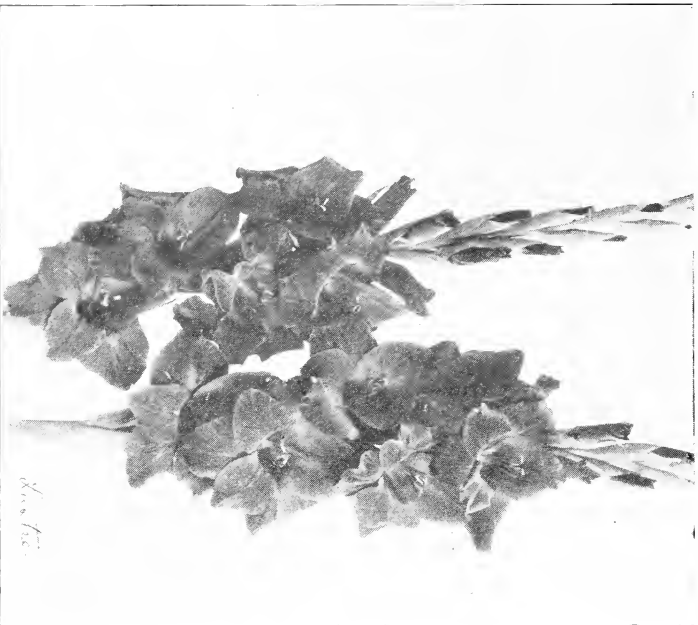

Goshen, Ind., my home, is located in a region where the soil and climate are peculiarly adapted for the growing of good, healthy bulbs which are solid and full of pep. All bulbs are disease free, up to size and true to name.

All in all you are able to buy from me, the most, and the best bulbs for the least money. A genuine heart deep guarantee for satisfaction!

These price lists were not put out earlier for I now know definitely how much stock of each variety I am able to furnish, thus giving the purchaser full benefit of the lowest prices.

The bulbs were left in the ground as long as possible to reach a good full growth and complete maturity. I do not like to ship out bulbs until they have been sufficiently cured and this has made fall shipments impossible.

My stocks are in fine shape and I can give you immediate reply on inquiries for large quantities of any variety desired. When a variety is sold out, no substitute is sent unless you so state with your order. Otherwise the money is refunded.
